Another Lady: A Biography of Constance Savery

An early shot introduces year-old pageant hopeful Harlow Miss Philadelphia walking through a crowd of people, angular features instantly setting her apart from the rest and establishing her star potential. But the archival impulse could indicate the will to go beyond that routine, to seek a linguistic and aesthetic renewal that speaks of the presence by means of the past, in a temporal situation that constantly reminds us how little history has taught us, in which with impunity and impudence facts and events are distorted and manipulated for political and economic ends, in which the value of culture and the figure of the intellectual seem to be seriously declining, and in which there is a general tendency toward a gutting of meaning from any form of communication or transmission of knowledge.
